HIS OWN FUNERAL SERMON*
NO. 2243

A SERMON
INTENDED FOR READING ON LORD’S-DAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1892.
DELIVERED BY C. H. SPURGEON, AT THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE, NEWINGTON,
ON THURSDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 19, 1890.

*This sermon was preached on the Lord’s-Day evening after Mr. William Olney “fell on sleep.”
Long before the beloved preacher was “called home,” it was selected for publication this week.
Mrs. Spurgeon feels that her dear husband could not have delivered a more suitable discourse for “his own funeral sermon.” She has, therefore, given it that title in the hope that many will be blessed by the message which “he, being dead, yet speaks.” Believing that many friends will wish to have this sermon for widespread circulation, the publishers will at once issue it in book form. Price one penny.

“For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep.”

IT is remarkable that David should say, in the 16th Psalm, “You will not leave my soul in hell; neither will you suffer Your Holy One to see corruption,” and yet that Paul should say concerning him, when preaching at Antioch, that he “saw corruption.” The key to this apparent contradiction is the fact that David did not speak of himself, but of his Lord. Peter, in his memorable sermon on the day of Pentecost, quotes the words of the psalmist, applies them to his risen Redeemer, and distinctly affirms that, in the Psalm, “David speaks concerning Him.”

It is worthy of notice that Peter and Paul both use the same argument about this statement of David.
These two apostles did not always agree, but however much they might differ about other matters, they were of one mind about the resurrection of Christ. I hope that whatever differences there may be among true preachers of the gospel, they will always be one in declaring the resurrection of our Lord. This cornerstone of the gospel must never be displaced or dishonored. The good news we are commissioned to declare is the same that Paul received and delivered—“that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day according to the Scriptures.”
Chief among the Scriptures fulfilled by the resurrection of Christ stands this Word of God which David, inspired by the Holy Spirit, wrote so long before the event—“You will not leave My soul in hell; neither will You suffer Your Holy One to see corruption.” The resurrection of Christ is the top stone of our faith. Because, “He, whom God raised again, saw no corruption,” Paul was able to say this to his hearers, “Be it known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins: and by Him all that believe are justified from all things, from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses.”

The argument of the apostle is this—David could not have meant himself when he said, “You will not suffer Your Holy One to see corruption,” because David died and his body was buried—and it did see corruption. He must, therefore, have referred to Christ, who is indeed God’s “Holy One.” Of Him the prophetic word was true, for God did not suffer Him “to see corruption.” He died and was laid in the grave, but He rose again on the third day. In that climate there was, while Christ lay in the grave, plenty of time for His body to become corrupt. The spices with which they perfumed the precious body would not have sufficed to keep back corruption—they would have helped conceal the unpleasant odor which putrefaction brings, but they would not have stopped the process of decay. But Christ rose again and no corruption had come to His body, for that body was a holy thing—it had no defect, nor taint of sin, as our bodies have. Begotten of the Holy Spirit, it was a pure thing. Though born of the Virgin Mary, it was united to the Godhead and not separated from it even in death—it saw no corruption. There is the apostle’s argument then—David speaking not of himself, but of someone else, says that the Lord will not suffer Him to see corruption—and this he spoke by the Spirit of the very Christ whom we preach to you as the Author and Finisher of salvation. He is living and reigning today, King of Kings and Lord of Lords. He that believes in Him, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and live forever with his risen, reigning Redeemer.

While Paul was speaking in the synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia, he incidentally used the words of our text—“David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep.” That is to be my subject on this occasion. Forgetting, for the present, the main argument, I would only look at this eddy in the current and draw your attention to the expression which dropped from Paul’s lips concerning David. Let us ask, first, What is it to serve our own generation? Secondly, What parts of our generation can we serve? And lastly, with tender memories of many who have gone from us, let us ask, What will happen to us when our service is done? Even that which happened to David—we shall, like he, “fall on sleep.”

I. First, then, WHAT IS IT TO SERVE OUR OWN GENERATION? This is a question which ought to interest us all very deeply. We live in the midst of our own generation and seeing that we are part of it, we should serve it that the generation in which our children shall live may be better than our own. Though our citizenship is in heaven, yet as we live on earth, we should seek to serve our generation while we pass as pilgrims to the better country.

What, then, is it for a man to serve his own generation?

I note, first, that it is not to be a slave to it. It is not to drop into the habits, customs, and ideas of the generation in which we live. People talk nowadays about the Zeitgeist, a German expression which need frighten nobody—and one of the papers says, “Spurgeon does not know whether there is such a thing.” Well, whether he knows anything about the Zeitgeist or not, he is not to serve this generation by yielding to any of its notions or ideas which are contrary to the word of the Lord. The gospel of Jesus Christ is not only for one generation, it is for all generations. It is the faith which needed to be “once for all delivered to the saints.” It was given stereotyped as it always is to be. It cannot change because it has been given of God and is therefore perfect—to change it would be to make it imperfect. It cannot change because it has been given to answer forever the same purpose, namely, to save sinners from going down to the pit and to fit them for going to heaven. That man serves his generation best who is not caught by every new current of opinion, but stands firmly by the truth of God which is a solid, immovable rock. But to serve our own generation in the sense of being a slave to it—its vassal and its valet—let those who care to do so go into such bondage and slavery if they will. Do you know what such a course involves? If any young man here shall begin to preach the doctrine and the thought of the age, within the next 10 years—perhaps within the next 10 months—he will have to eat his own words and begin his work all over again. When he has got into the new style and is beginning to serve the present world, he will within a short time have to contradict himself, for this age like every other is “always learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.” But if you begin with God’s word and pray God the Holy Spirit to reveal it to you till you really know it, then, if you are spared to teach for the next 50 years, your testimony at the close will not contradict your testimony at the beginning. You will ripen in experience. You will expand in your apprehension of the truth. You will become more clear in your utterance—and it will be the same truth all along. Is it not a grand thing to build up, from the beginning of life to the end of it, the same gospel? But to set up opinions to knock them down again, as though they were ninepins, is a poor business for any servant of Christ. David did not in that way serve his own generation—he was the master of his age—not its slave. I would urge every Christian man to rise to his true dignity and be a blessing to those among whom he lives, as David was. Christ “has made us kings and priests unto God His Father”—it is not meet that we should cringe before the spirit of the age or lick the dust whereon “advanced thinkers” have chosen to tread. Beloved, see to this and learn the distinction between serving your own generation and being a slave to it.

In the next place, in seeking to answer the question, “What is it to serve our own generation? I would say, it is not to fly from it. If any man says, “The world is so bad that I will avoid coming into contact with it altogether. Even the teaching of Christianity has become so diluted and is so thoroughly on the Down-Grade that I will have nothing to do with it,” he is certainly not serving his own generation. If he shall shut himself up like a hermit in his cave, and leave the world to go to ruin as it may, he will not be like David, for he served his own generation before he fell asleep. She that goes into a nunnery and he that enters a monastery are like soldiers who run away and hide among the baggage. You must not do anything of the sort. Come forward and fight evil, and triumph over it, whether it be evil of doctrine, evil of practice, or evil of any other kind. Be bold for Christ—bear your witness and be not ashamed. If you do not take your stand in this way, it can never truly be said of you that you served your generation. Instead of that, the truth will be that you allowed your generation to make a coward of you, or to muzzle you like a dog and to send you out into the streets neither to bark nor to bite, nor to do anything by which you might prove that there is a soul within you.

If we ask, again, What is it to serve our generation? I answer, it is to perform the common duties of life as David did. David was the son of a farmer, a sheep-owner, and he took, first of all, to the keeping of the sheep. Many young men do not like to do the common work of their own father’s business. You do not want to drudge, you say—you want to be a king. Well, there are not many openings in that line of business, and I shall not recommend anyone to be eager to enter them if there were. “Seek you great things for yourself? Seek them not.” Before David sowed the scepeter, he grasped the shepherd’s crook. He that at home cannot or will not undertake ordinary duties, will not be likely to serve his age. The girl who dreams about the foreign missionary field, but cannot darn her brother’s stockings, will not be of service either at home or abroad. Do the commonplace things, the ordinary things that come in your way, and you will begin to serve your generation as David served his.

But serving our generation means more than this. It is to be ready for the occasion when it comes. In the midst of the routine of daily life, we should by diligence in duty prepare for whatever may be our future opportunity, waiting patiently until it comes. Look at David’s occasion of becoming famous. He never sought it. He did not go up and down among his sheep, sighing and crying, “Oh, that I could get away from this dull business of looking after these flocks! My brothers have gone to the camp—they will get on as soldiers—but here am I buried among these rocks, to look after these poor beasts.” He was wiser than that. He quietly waited God’s time. That is always a wise thing to do. If you are to serve God, wait till He calls you to do His work—He knows where to find you when He wants you—you need not advertise yourself to His omniscience. At length the set time came for David. On a certain day, his father bade him go to his brothers and take them some corn and some loaves, with cheeses for their captain. And he reached the camp just at the time when the giant Goliath was stalking forth and defying all the armies of Israel to meet him. Now is David’s time and the young man is ready for it. If he had lost the opportunity he might have remained a shepherd all the rest of his days. He tells Saul how he slew both the lion and the bear—and prophesies that the uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them, seeing he had defied the armies of the living God. Disdaining Saul’s armor, he takes his sling and his five smooth stones out of the brook—and soon he comes back with the gory head of the giant in his hand. If you want to serve the church and serve the age, beloved friend, be wide awake when the occasion comes. Jump into the saddle when the horse is at your door and God will bless you if you are on the look-out for opportunities of serving Him.

What is it, again, to serve our generation? It is to maintain true religion. This David did. He had grave faults in his later life which we will not extenuate, but he never swerved from his allegiance to Jehovah the true God. No word or action of his ever sanctioned anything like idolatry, or turning aside from the worship of Jehovah, the God of Israel. He bore a noble witness to his Lord. He said, “I will speak of Your testimonies also before kings, and will not be ashamed.” And we may be sure that he was as good as his word and that when he met with foreign potentates, he vindicated the living God before them. The whole set and current of his life, with the exception of his terrible fall, was to the glory of God in whom he trusted and to the praise of that God who had delivered him. We, too, shall truly serve those among whom we dwell by maintaining true religion. Had 10 righteous men been found in Sodom, it would have been spared and the world today only escapes the righteous judgment of God because of the presence in it of those who fear Him and tremble at His word. The spread of “pure and undefiled religion” is a certain way to serve those around us. To help true religion, David wrote many Psalms which were sung all over the land of Israel. A wonderful collection of poems they are—there is none like them under heaven. Not even a Milton, with all his mighty soaring, can equal David in the height of his adoration of God and the depth of his experience. That man does no mean service for his time who gives the people new songs which they can sing unto their God. While none can equal the inspired psalms of the Hebrew king, which must always form the choicest praise-book of the church, other men may in lesser degree serve their own generation, by the will of God, in a similar way and be blessed in the deed.

To serve our own generation is not a single action, done at once, and over forever—it is to continue to serve all our life. Notice well that David served “his own generation”—not only a part of it—but the whole of it. He began to serve God and he kept on serving God. How many young men have I seen who were going to do wonders! Ah, me! They were as proud of the intention as though they had already done the deed. They took a front seat and they seemed to think that everybody ought to admire them because of what they were going to do. And they were so pleased with the project that they never carried it out. They thought that they might meet with some mishap if they really attempted to do the thing—and the project was so beautiful that they preserved it under a glass shade—and there it is now. Nothing has been accomplished. Nothing has been done, though much has been thought of. This is folly.

Some, too, begin well, and they serve their God earnestly for a time, but all of a sudden their service stops. One cannot quite tell how it happens, but we never hear of them afterwards. Men, as far as I know them, are wonderfully like horses. You get a horse and you think, “This is a first-rate animal,” and so it is. It goes well for a while, but all of a sudden it drops lame and you have to get another one. So it is with church members. I notice that, every now and then, they get a singular lameness. To very many we have to say, even as Paul said to the Galatians, “You did run well; who did hinder you, that you should not obey the truth?” But David continually served God to the end of his life. May we all, by divine grace, thus serve our whole generation, too!

Yet more is included in this faithful serving of our generation. It is to prepare for those who are to come after us. David served his generation to the very end by providing for the next generation. He was not permitted to build the Temple, but he stored up a great mass of gold and silver to enable his son, Solomon, to carry out his noble design and build a house for God. This is real service—to begin to serve God in early youth—to keep on till old age shall come and even then, to say, “I cannot expect to serve the Lord much longer, but I will prepare the way, as far as I can, for those who will come after me.”

Many years ago, Dr. Rippon, the minister of this church, which then worshipped in New Park Street, was known to prophesy about his successor. When he was very old, after having been pastor for more than 60 years, it is in the memory of some still living that he was accustomed to pray for the minister who would come after him. The old man looked forward to one who should come and carry on the work after he was obliged to leave it. So must you and I do. We must be looking ahead as far as we can, not with unbelieving anxiety or unholy curiosity, but after the fashion in which David prepared abundantly before his death. If we cannot find a successor to enter upon our service when we have to leave it, yet let us do all we can to make his work the easier when he comes to it.

II. In the second place, let us ask a question even more practical than the first—WHAT PARTS OF OUR GENERATION CAN WE SERVE? It is truly written, “None of us lives to himself,” we either help or hinder those among whom we dwell. Let us see to it that we serve our age and become stepping-stones rather than stumbling blocks to those by whom we are surrounded. We shall serve our generation best by being definite in our aim. In trying to reach everybody we may help nobody. The wise man tries to serve somebody in particular—where, then, should we make the effort? In answering that question, I divide the generation in which we live into three parts.

First, there is the part that is setting. Some are like the sun going down in the west—they will soon be gone. Serve them, dear brethren. You that are in health and vigor, comfort them, strengthen them, and help them all you can. Be a joy to that dear old man who has been spared to you even beyond the allotted threescore years and ten, and praise God for the grace that has upheld him through his long pilgrimage. Look on his grey hairs as a crown of glory—make his descent to the grave as easy as you can. He once was as young as you are. He once had the vigor that you have. Console him, cheer him, give him the respect that is due to his many years. Do not let him feel that you consider him an old fogey who lingers, superfluous, on the stage—but learn from his experience, imitate his perseverance, and ask God to be with you in your old age, as He is with him.

The second portion of our generation which we can serve is the part that is shining. I mean those in middle life who are like the sun at its zenith. They are working hard, bearing the burden and heat of the day. As yet their bones are full of marrow and they are strong men ready for service for the Lord. Seek to sustain their efforts in every possible way. Help them all you can. As one of those in middle life, I especially ask the help of all my Christian brethren, members of this church, or of any other church, who can aid me by their sympathies and their prayers. Get closer to one another and fill up the vacant spaces that death’s arrows continue to make in our ranks. Suffer nothing to be left undone which may further the work of Christ or help the people around you who are so quickly passing away. Many of us have been together for nearly 40 years, and when, one after another, our dear brethren are taken away, let it be everybody’s ambition to try to make up what shall be lacking through their departure. This is what is due to those who are like the shining part of our generation.
Especially, however, I want to speak to you about serving your own generation in the part that is rising—the young people who are like the sun in the east, as yet scarcely above the horizon. This part of our generation is especially the care of parents and Sunday school teachers, but let us not leave it entirely to them; we can, most of us, do something to serve this portion of our generation before we fall asleep. Beloved, I commend to your care and attention the children and young people who abound in our midst. In them lies our hope for the future of God’s cause on earth.

In the first place, they are the most reachable. Happily, we can get at the children. The mass of people in London go to no place of worship—the old habit of attending church or chapel seems to have been given up—but the people will still let the children go to Sunday school, even if they do it from no better motive than that of getting them out of the way in the afternoon or in order that the house may be quiet without them. Anyway, if you open a school anywhere in London, you can quickly get it filled with children. If you cannot do one thing, do another. If you cannot reach the fathers and the mothers, though you should earnestly try to get at them, yet if you can reach the children, take care that you lose no opportunity of teaching them the things of God; this is the work that lies nearest to you—seek to accomplish it and “Whatever your hands find to do, do it with all your might.”

Moreover, the children are the most impressible. What can we do with the man who is hardened in sin? The grace of God can reach him, I know, but the children as yet have not known these evil ways. They are horrified when they hear about them. Teach them while yet the clay is soft—mold it for God. May the Lord Himself help you, dear Sunday school teachers and others who labor among the children, to do your work right well! Nobly are you serving your own generation and the generation to follow.

The salvation of the children ought to be sought with double diligence, for they will last the longest. If a man of 60 or 70 is converted, he will have only a short time for serving God, for he will soon be gone. If a child is converted, a long life of usefulness may enrich the church of God. Therefore, look after the children. If you had a gathering of Christian men and women and were to put the question to them, “How many of you were converted before you were twenty-one?” you would be greatly surprised to find that probably five out of six would answer that, in early years, they were led to know the grace of God and trust in Christ as their Savior. I tried the experiment one evening with a number of friends who had come together from different places. “How many of you owe your salvation to your father’s prayers, your mother’s instruction, or your Sunday school teachers’ influence in youth?” I asked. And almost everyone out of a company of about 25 said that it was in early youth that God blessed some instrumentality to their conversion.

Remember, too, that those who are converted when children usually make the best saints. These of whom I have just spoken, who gave the answer that they were converted in their youth, were ministers of the gospel. I do not know whether the same rule is true among ordinary Christians, but among those who have become leaders of men, in nearly every case they yielded to Christ while they were young. Our thoughts at this time cannot but be occupied with our dear friend, William Olney, who has just been taken from us so suddenly, to our unutterable grief. He was as earnest as a youth as he was when he became an old man. Indeed, I never knew a moment when he was not earnest. I never even knew him to be dull or depressed—he seemed to be always joyous and glad. He would almost frighten me sometimes, with his jubilation under pain—for when he was in agonies of suffering and could only sit on the platform for a short time—there was never anything like depression about him. He was just as glad and happy as if he had been in perfect health. I wish that it were so with all of us. Young Christians do become the best Christians. Early piety is usually eminent piety, so seek to catch the children while they are young and train them for the Lord—then they will be ready to serve their generation in their turn.

We ought to look after the children again for they are specially named by Christ. He said, “Feed My sheep,” but He also said, “Feed My lambs.” I would almost be inclined to say that the Lord made the same division of the generation as I have done. When He said, the first time, “Feed My sheep,” He may have meant the old sheep. When He said, the second time, “Feed My sheep,” He may have had especially in mind the middle-aged ones. There is no doubt that when He said, “Feed My lambs,” He meant the young people. Christ gave the lambs a place all to themselves—“Feed My lambs.” I wish Christians would consider more seriously how the children ought to be looked after by the church. I read the other day of a boy who wished to join in membership with the people of God. His father said that he was too young and kept him back. He was big enough, however, to be sent out to fold the sheep one night. When he came in, his father said, “Jack have you folded the sheep?” “Yes,” he said, “I folded all the sheep,” laying great stress on the last word. “And did you put the lambs in?” asked his father. “No,” he replied, Tell someone today how much you love Jesus Christ.
But next we are told that when his work was done, he fell on sleep. Did his soul sleep? By no means. It was not his soul that is spoken of here, for we read that he “saw corruption.” Souls do no see corruption. Paul is speaking of David’s body. “He fell on sleep, and was laid with his fathers, and saw corruption.” His body fell into its last, long sleep, and saw corruption. If you like to take the words in the wider sense, he was asleep as far as the world was concerned—he had done with it. No sorrow came to him, no earthly joy, no mingling with the strife of tongues, no girding his harness for the war. “He fell on sleep.” He had nothing to do with anything that was under the sun. And that is the case with our dear friend whom we miss from his place today—and it will soon be the case also with you and with me. There is not much here worth stopping for and when our work is finished, like David, we shall fall on sleep. We shall then be asleep to all the declensions of the age, all the strifes of men, and all else which gives us sorrow of heart.

Does not this word further mean that his dying was like going to sleep? It usually is so with God’s people. Some die with a considerable measure of pain, but as a rule, when believers pass away, they just shut their eyes and open them in heaven. I have had infinitely more pleasure at deathbeds than I have had at weddings. I have known many marriage feasts—I have gone there at duty’s call—but I can confirm what Solomon said, “It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting: for it is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart.” I am not aware that I have gained anything at a wedding, but I have gained much at the dying bed, as I have seen the joy and peace and rapture of girls and youths, and men and women passing away joyfully to be “forever with the Lord.” I have known some of our number here who were too bashful and backward to ever say much for Christ when they were well—but when I was sent to see them die, there was not a bit of bashfulness about them. They spoke out so boldly that I have said to them, “Why, if you get better, you must preach for me one of these Sundays.” And they have smiled and said that they would never get better. They have known this and they have rejoiced to think that they were going where they would not need any preacher, but would see their Lord Jesus face to face. How they have brightened up at the mention of His dear name! Some of them have sung then, though I never knew them to sing before—and some of them have told of things which they seemed to see and hear which eyes have not seen, nor ears heard, till God has revealed them to the departing spirit. You remember such dying beds, do you not? Was it your mother or your father who passed away in that glorious style? Perhaps it was a beloved brother, or a sister, or a friend. Well, if we know Christ, it shall be ours, by-and-by, to sleep in Him. You who believe in Christ ought no more to dread death than you dread going to sleep at night. You will, before you sleep, commit yourself to God, and as you put your head on the pillow, the similitude of death will be upon you, even sleep which one has called, “death’s cousin.” You are not afraid of that. Why, then, should any dismay seize you in prospect of that which is but another sleep? Rather sing to yourself—

“In hallowed union, indivisible—
Good night!
Until we meet again before His throne,
Clothed in the spotless robe He gives His own,
Until we know even as we are known—
Good night!”

Let us follow where He leads. Perchance some of us may tarry until He comes again. There will be no death for such—they will but change the service of their generation for the service of the glorified. “Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed.” Then, when the trumpet shall sound, this corruptible shall put on incorruption—those who sleep in Christ shall awake in resurrection splendor and together we shall serve our Lord day and night in His Temple forever. Meanwhile, serve your own generation by the will of God. And if the Lord should tarry, you will fall on sleep, even as David did. May God bless you, who believe in Jesus, and save the unsaved who are in our midst, for our Lord Jesus Christ’s sake! Amen.

PORTION OF SCRIPTURE READ BEFORE SERMON—ACTS 13:14-43.
HYMNS FROM “OUR OWN HYMN BOOK”—879, 694, 844.
The note at the end of last week’s sermon informed all readers that the long-dreaded blow had, at last, fallen and that their much-loved preacher had been called to his heavenly home. His voice shall no more be heard on earth, but he will continue to speak for his Lord through the press—and especially by his sermons.

Attention has been already directed to the overruling hand of God in the selection of the sermons to be published at this memorable time. The one for next week will be the third in the series preached in connection with the death of the late Mr. William Olney, the text being Ephesians 5:30. And the following week, the address by Mr. Spurgeon at Mr. William Olney’s funeral service in the Tabernacle, will be published. A considerable portion of this address was revised by Mr. Spurgeon’s own hand. With it the publishers will give a portrait of the beloved preacher and also a portrait of the late Mr. W. Olney.

The revision of the weekly sermons and the editorship of The Sword and the Trowel will remain in the hands of those who have carried on the work during Mr. Spurgeon’s long illness. He was only able, personally, to revise two sermons throughout the many months that he was laid aside. These will now have a special value in the estimation of his many friends. They are the two entitled, “Gratitude for Deliverance from the Grave” (No. 2237) and “A Stanza of Deliverance” (No. 2241).

There is not much that can be recorded here concerning Mr. Spurgeon’s last illness and his falling asleep in Jesus. The Sword and the Trowel for March will contain an account of the varying experiences in the sunny land, from the time when he delivered his two New Year addresses until all that remained of him was borne away to the railway station, en route for England, amid tokens of widespread sorrow and sympathy. Among other items of interest will be reports of the last two Sabbath evening services conducted by Mr. Spurgeon at the Hotel Beau Rivage. And later numbers of The Sword and the Trowel will furnish the readers with descriptions of “Mr. Spurgeon’s last drives at Mentone,” with reproductions of photographs taken under his personal supervision.
